

GRACE ALDRICH

ARTIST BIO

Grace Aldrich is an award winning surreal illustrator and gallery artist from Kansas City, KS. Her early art education was mostly self taught, she learned through a variety of means such as books, master studies, and videos online. After graduating high school she briefly attended Johnson County Community College to study animation before leaving the program to attend The Illustration Academy. Here she learned under celebrated artists such as John English, Dale Stephanos, Edward Kinsella, and Sterling Hundley.

Her works are deeply personal, made in an effort to visualize impossible places, to seek out the unknown, and find meaning in nonsense. In addition to the visual arts, she is also an avid writer, basing her personal pieces on the stories she writes. Built in a world of her own, all her works are connected. The paintings tell fragments of a story that leaves the viewer free to put together.

Her clients and accolades include Vanity Fair, The Folio Society, The Society of Illustrators, The Society of Illustrators of Los Angeles, 3x3, Surreal Salon, Communication Arts, and American Illustration.